

Term 2003-2004

Dr. Irene Chen

University of Houston Downtown

Dr. Chen received her Doctor of Education in Instructional Technology from University of Houston in 1998. Currently, she is assistant Professor and Technology Coordinator in the Department of Urban Education at the University of Houston Downtown (UHD). In addition, she is assistant Chair of Department of Urban Education at UHD. Dr. Chen has diverse professional experiences. Previously, she is instructional technology specialist, learning technology coordinator, technology specialist, telecommunications analyst, and computer programmer/analyst. She has taught numerous undergraduate and graduate levels courses in instructional technology and computer applications, and delivered many K-12 in-service training and professional development activities for university staff and faculty members.

Dr. Feng-Qi Lai 来凤琪

Indiana State University

Dr. Lai currently is an assistant professor in the Department of Curriculum, Instruction, and Media Technology, School of Education, Indiana State University. Before coming to the US in 1992, Dr. Lai served as the associate director and lecturer, Foreign Languages Division, Department of Basic Sciences, Shanghai TieDao (now Tongji) University, Shanghai, China, for ten years. After graduating from Purdue University with her Master's and Doctoral degrees in Educational Technology, she worked as an instructional designer for National Education Training group, director of training for Advanced Technical Support, Inc., and senior instructional designer and project manager for Cognitive Concepts, Inc. She is the inventor of several patented and to-be-patented educational software products. She has been recorded in Marquis Who's Who in America, Who's Who in the World, Who's Who in American Education, and Who's Who of American Women. Her research interests include learning, motivation, and the impact of various instructional strategies. In particular, she has studied the integration of computers in education, including the design, development, and implementation of interactive multimedia software and software-based instructional strategies."

Dr. Guoli Liang 梁国立

University of Wisconsin - Whitewater

Dr. Liang is an assistant professor of Department of Health, Physical Education, Recreation, and Coaching at the University of Wisconsin -- Whitewater. He received an Ed.D. in Physical Education Teacher Education at West Virginia University in 2001, a M.A. in Education Psychology from West Virginia University, and an M.Ed. in Comparative Physical Education and Sport from Beijing Normal University. His B.Ed. in Physical Education was from Shandong Teachers University. Dr. Liang serves as Journal Reviewer for Contemporary Issues in Technology & Teacher Education (www.CITEJournal.org). His current research interests are Pedagogy (including Pedagogy on E-Learning), Information Technology in Education, Cognition and Motor Learning, Information Technology in Sports. He is an active member of professional organizations including American Alliance of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance and Association for the Advancement of Computing in Education (AACE).

Dr. Ronghua Ouyang 欧阳荣华

Kennesaw State University

Dr. Ouyang is an associate professor of Education Technology and is teaching in the Department of Elementary and Early Childhood Education at Kennesaw State University. He received B.A. degree in English from Nanjing University in 1982, got M.A. in Rhetoric and Linguistics for Indiana University of PA in 1988, and Ed.D. in Elementary Education with elementary education, computing assisted instruction and educational research focused from Indiana University of PA in 1993.

Currently, he serves on the board of directors ACPSS and as assistant director and secretary of the Sino-American Education Consortium. His research interests are in the areas of implementing technology in teaching and learning, distance learning and web application. He is willing to serve on the board of SICET and do the best to move SICET to another level.

Dr. Chih-Hsiung Tu 涂志雄

George Washington University

Dr. Tu is an assistant professor in Educational Technology Leadership at George Washington University, Washington, DC. He is a consultant in educational/instructional technology and possesses experience in distance education, eLearning, technology training in teacher education, online learning community, learning organization, and knowledge management. His research interests are distance education, socio-cognitive learning, socio-cultural learning, online learning community, learning organization, and knowledge management. He has authored many articles, book chapters, presented book proposals, conference proceedings, and others.

Dr. Lih-Ching Chen Wang 陈丽卿

Cleveland State University

For Dr. Wang's biographical sketch, please see <http://wang.ed.csuohio.edu/bio.htm>.

Dr. Steve Chi-Yin Yuen 阮枝贤

University of Southern Mississippi

Dr. Yuen is Professor of Technology Education at The University of Southern Mississippi. Currently, he is the graduate program leader of the Instructional Technology program at The University of Southern Mississippi. He was a Senior Fulbright Scholar to Taiwan in 1992-1993 and was named "2002 Mississippi Technology Educator of the Year" recently by Mississippi Educational Computing Association. He has published extensively in international/national referred journals, written grant proposals, conducted seminars and workshops, and presented over 70 papers at international/national/state conferences. Also, Dr. Yuen is an active member of numerous honorary societies and professional organizations. Currently, he is serving as Vice-President as well as a member of Board of Director for Chinese American Educational Research and Development Association (CAERDA).